The LOST HERD

STORM WAS BREWING AS LASH LARUE GUIDED RUSH TOWARD THE HILLS--IT LOOKED LIKE A WET NIGHT IN THE OPEN TILL THE ROVING MARSHAL HEARD THE CATTLE AND FOUND THE COW CAMP AT THE BASE OF THE HILLS...

HOWDY, BECKON YOU COULD SPARE SOME COFFEE AND BEANS FOR A STRANGER ON A NIGHT THAT'S GONNA BE WET?

LIGHT AND REST, COWBOY! THERE'S PLENTY OF EVERYTHING AND A DRY PLACE TO SLEEP!

LATER, WELL FED AND SHELTERED--LASH LISTENED TO THE RUMOR OF THE STORM...

THESE STEERS ARE GETTIN' BRITISH! THE THUNDER SCARES 'EM!

I HEARD GUNS, TOO, ANSTER--LISTEN CLOSELY...

LASH La RUE WESTERN

THE TERRIFIED HERD WAS IN MOTION BEFORE THE TRAIL CREW COULD ROLL OUT OF THEIR BLANKETS! AND THE CLOUDBURY BUNDLED EVERYBODY ...

WE'LL NEVER CATCH THAT HERD TONIGHT! WE'LL FIND 'EM IN THE MORNING AN' THE JASPER'S WHO STAMPED 'EM!

I'LL STICK AROUND AND GIVE YOU A HAND!

WE'D BETTER HEAD BACK! I'M SOAKED!

GOOD IDEA! WE CAN GET AN EARLY START IN THE MORNING!

THEY WERE UP AT DAWN--THE STORM WAS OVER AND THEY BUSIED THEMSELVES CHECKING GUNS AND AMMUNITION, THEN SADDLED UP ...

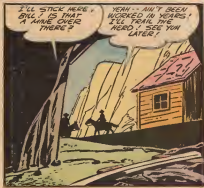

THE WHOLE HERD HEADED FOR THE CANYON! KNOW THE PLACE, BILL?

I SURE DO! IT'S A DEAD END--WE'LL FIND THE COWS IN A FEW MINUTES!

THERE'S THE END OF THE LINE--BUT WHERE ARE THE CATTLE?

THEY MUST'VE TURNED AND CAME BACK OUT AGAIN! LET'S GO FIND 'EM!

I'LL STICK HERE, BILL! IS THAT A HIVE OVER THERE?

YEAH--AIN'T BEEN WORKED IN YEARS! I'LL TRAIL THE HERD! SEE YUN LATER!

THE ROVING MARSHAL MOVED IN TILL HE WAS IN THE SHADOW OF THE CLIFF AND FELT A COOL WIND FROM THE OLD HIVE ...

THAT BREEZE MEANS THERE'S ANOTHER OPENING AT THE OTHER SIDE!

YOU GOT TOO NOSEY, HENRY!

LASH La RUE WESTERN

...AND YOU GOT TOO CARELESS!

WE DON'T WANT NO... UGH!

THE MAN WAS WOUNDED. AFTER TAKING HIS GUN -- THE EDWIN MARSHAL MOVED ON INTO THE TUNNEL...

THERE'S A GUARD AT THIS END TOO! THESE JASPER'S ARE SURE CAUTIOUS!

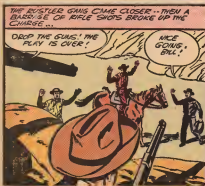

I DON'T LIKE STAR-TOTIN' RAINBOWS WHO...

AND I DON'T LIKE RUSTLERS!

THERE'S THE HERD, BUT IT LOOKS LIKE I'M IN A JAM!

GET 'EM, BOYS! HE'LL SPILL EVERYTHING IF HE GETS AWAY!

THE RUSTLER GANG CAME CLOSER -- THEN A BARRAGE OF RIFLE SHOTS BROKE UP THE CHARGE...

DROP THE GUNS! THE PLAY IS OVER!

NICE GOING, BILL!

THAT WAS TIGHT! NOW'D YOU KNOW ENOUGH TO COME OVER THE CANYON WALL?

WE HEARD YOUR SHOTS, YOU SURE FOUND THE LOST HERD FOR US, LASH! ALL I HEARD ABOUT LASH LARUE, THE EDWIN MARSHAL, WAS TRUE!

The End

DAWN DEADLINE

Sheriff Noha Clark was checking the cylinder of his .45. He had removed the cartridges and oiled his gun. He had just finished reinserting the bullets when the door to his office opened. He spun around in his seat with his gun in his hand only to face his deputy, Harry Kane.

"Guess I got the jitters, Harry. Did you find out anything about those notices?"

The deputy shook his head in the negative. Then he took from his pocket two folded sheets of paper which he opened and placed on the desk.

"They read the same as the others, sheriff. Give you until the dawn of next week to get your affairs in order. Then get out of town or be shot. The whole town's talking about it. Got me beat who is behind all this?"

The sheriff wet his lips with the tip of his tongue. It was an old habit of his whenever he was nervous.

"Does anybody say I'm scared?" he demanded from his deputy. If they do, just let me know the names of those lamb livered creatures and I'll show them a thing or two."

"Take it easy, sheriff," advised Kane. "Everybody in Wellstown knows you're a fightin' man, not the kind to be frightened. They are betting odds that you'll stay. I'm going to see what I can learn from some sources of mine. See you this evening."

The deputy left the office. As soon as he had mounted his horse and ridden away, another man walked into the sheriff's office. No need to say who he was. That long black coat and those two pearl handled six shooters told every man, woman, and child in the West his identity.

"The Prince Albert Kid," gasped the sheriff. "Thank Heavens you came. I see that Marshal Bodow gave you my message. I didn't know where to reach you."

"I met the marshal at Fort Benton," explained the famous man of the West. "He told me about those warnings. Somebody has a grim sense of deadly humor planting those all over town. One look at your face and I can see it has you worried. Give me a list of the three men that hate you most. I'll do a bit of investigating."

Al Jabbour, forman of the KC ranch was fixing his saddle when he looked up at his unexpected and uninvited visitor.

"What brings you here?" he said as he continued his work.

The Prince Albert Kid handed him one of the printed warnings. Al Jabbour read it and then laughed.

"Hope it scares that sheriff out of town. He killed my own brother and I hate him. If I ever can get the chance to get even and get away with it, then I'm your man."

"Your brother held up the stagecoach and killed the driver. He resisted arrest," explained the Prince Albert Kid. "And the sheriff was forced to kill your brother in the gun battle that followed. Did you have these notices printed?"

"Good idea, but not mine," replied the foreman. "I don't want to be rude, but I got a lot of work to do."

"Go ahead with your work," suggested the Prince Albert Kid. "But here's something to think about during the next few days. Whoever kills the sheriff will die by my guns, and I never made an idle promise in my life."

Finished saying those words, the Prince Albert Kid mounted his horse and rode away. An hour later he stopped before a small shack on the side of a mountain. He knocked twice and a gruff voice told him to enter. Seated at a rude table was a giant of a man wearing a beard. He had only a good left hand. His right hand had been shattered by a shotgun charge.

"Well if it isn't the Prince Albert Kid?" said the man. "What are you doing up in these here parts of the country? Not looking for me. I haven't stepped out of line."

The famous man of the West noticed a circular on the table. He took it in his hand and read it. It was the same warning to the sheriff that had circulated throughout Wellstown.

"Where did you get this?" he demanded.

"Yesterday I rode to town for supplies," explained Phil Barok. "I saw one of those notices on a board. Haven't had a laugh for several years. The sheriff shot me up and I never forgot it. Now I can enjoy knowing he's a scared rabbit."

"You tried to jump another man's mining claim," snapped back the Prince Albert Kid. "Then you tried to shoot the sheriff. You only got what you deserved. Have you anything to do with these warnings?"

"Wish I did," answered Phil Borok. "I hate the sheriff. My luck to the guy who gives him a dose of his own medicine. Hope the sheriff get's shot."

"Just something to keep you awake," said the Prince Albert Kid as he mounted his horse. "If the sheriff is killed, you may rest assured I'll get the killer."

Wellstown had only one hotel. The famous man of the West was seated in the lobby. He had sent word to Lou Singer to come down for a little chat. The killer who had once been a range detective thought it best to obey that message. He sat down on the chair and spoke his mind.

"I'm a busy man. What's bathering you?"

"Somebody is out to get rid of the sheriff. Could it be you? You were sent to jail only once in your life and Sheriff Noah Clark was the man. You swore you would get even. What brings you into town?"

"My health," was the sarcastic reply. "So long as you are playing nursemaid to the sheriff, a guy would have to be lacy to try anything in this town. And don't warn me, I know that you can outdraw and outshot me with your guns."

The Prince Albert Kid left the hotel and walked down the main street. He stopped in front of a small printing place that published the Wellstown Weekly. He entered and greeted the editor, Jacob Tempra.

"Did you find out where those notices were printed?"

"Took a bit of work," remarked the editor. "Figured it had to be some place not too far from here. The letters G and T were worn. So I got hold of all the newspapers in this and the adjoining counties. I found the Barnsville Times had worn letters G and T. You can take it from there."

The Prince Albert Kid knew that by hard riding he could reach Barnsville and return in not less than ten hours. The deadline for the sheriff to leave was approaching. He spoke to the deputy, Harry Kane.

"I'll be back in town tomorrow. Tell Al

Jabbour, Phil Braok and Lou Singer I want to meet them at the hotel tomorrow at noon. This is on order. See that they are there.

The next day a tired and weary Prince Albert Kid faced three hostile men. The deputy sheriff was at his side.

"According to the law of this state," said the famous man of the West, "I have the right in an emergency to deputize every citizen. So I deputize you three to protect the sheriff. And if anything happens to him, the results will not be pleasant."

The three men went into a huddle and then decided they had no alternative but to obey Al Jabbour saw the humor in the situation.

"The three of us hate the guts of Sheriff Naha Clark. Sure, we would like to see him dead and buried. Now we got to protect him. We'll do a good job, boys."

Word spread throughout Wellstown that for the next twenty-four hours all people except the three special deputies were to remain off the streets. And the citizens obeyed the order. Throughout the night, each of the special deputies took turns standing in front of the sheriff's office. The sun was rising in the sky and the sheriff was still alive. So according to orders, they went to the hotel. The sheriff was seated at his desk. In front of him was his gun. His deputy, Harry Kane took the gun in his right hand. Then bitter words passed his lips.

"I'm going to kill you, Naha, and with your own gun. Then I'll be out of here in a second and ride to my shack. They'll never know who did it."

There was no fear on the sheriff's face as he asked a simple one word question.

"Why?"

"Because I am the better man," said Harry Kane. "I should have been sheriff. You took the job and made me second man. Now I'll kill you."

"Not a bullet in that gun with powder in the shell," proclaimed the sheriff. "The Prince Albert Kid found out it was you that had those circulars printed. I'm going to fight you with my fists and give you the beating of your life."

The fight lasted a half hour and a battered man was on the floor. Then the door of the side closet opened and the Prince Albert Kid came out.

"I could have arrested him but you must uphold your own prestige. It was best this way Brother, am I stiff from standing in that closet."

The second, as I argued in a discussion of the story and ending, may be viewed as a political statement regarding the nature of experience as constitutive of culture. I suggest, in place of local persons of color, to be added to a community, the notion of individuals of the individual trying hard to grasp, in essence, a personality as well as a community. In this way, the story may be seen as an attempt to show that individuals, like us, have good reasons as well as bad of such individual choices.
